I work on dematerialization in order to bring into focus what once was. Through radical reduction, I create space for something that can unfold immaterially.

Life is not material. I understand my work as an approach to the question of life itself. By using my body within its constraints, I expose it to perception.

Hüttermann draws from biographical experiences; her body serves as a reservoir and medium for everything collected and negotiated in the studio. Her practice spans video performance, drawing, assemblage, text, and sound. The body, in its fleeting and sublime moments, is continually retranslated and embedded anew. Elements of video—loop, seriality, precise framing—are transferred to various media and extended into the space, forming an intermedial field that makes movement, rhythm, and inner logic perceptible.

Katharina Sophia Hüttermann (*1995 in Seehausen) studied Art and Visual History as well as Economics (B.A.) at Humboldt University of Berlin, and Art in Public Space and New Artistic Strategies (M.F.A.) at the Bauhaus University Weimar. Her works have been shown, among others, at EWZ Unterwerk Selnau Zurich (2026), Seeburg-Bootshalle Kiel (2025), 480 site specific, Naples (2024), Haus der Statistik, Berlin (2023), Bauhaus Museum Weimar (2022), and the Kunstsammlungen Chemnitz (2021).
